

ABSTRACT

A gear shaft having a tubular body defining an axially extending cavity and an outer surface having a first engagement area for rotatably supporting a gear, and wherein a passage extends between the cavity and the engagement area for providing lubrication between the first engagement area of the gear shaft and the gear to reduce friction.